Framework Conditions

1. Conference Content and Program Committee

The content design of the conference, including the theme and workshops, is managed by representatives of the participating user companies. Together, they form the program committee, which represents a cross-section of various industries.

2. Presidency

The chairperson of the conference (president) is selected from the program committee. He or she is responsible for the official opening and closing of the event.

3. Participants

At the conference, IT managers from user companies meet with members of management and technology experts from provider companies. Participation requires a willingness to actively participate in the workshops.

4. Participant Limitation

The number of participants is limited to 100. This limitation ensures effective work in the workshops and an open and transparent exchange on site.

Multiple participants from the same user company may be registered for the event. For vendor companies, participation is generally limited to one person per company. However, companies taking on an active role in the program (e.g. co-moderating a workshop) may be permitted to book an additional ticket for another participant from the same company.

5. Conference Style and Confidentiality

FINAKI places great importance on a neutral, vendor-independent, and disruption-free setting. Maintaining a confidential and open working environment is a top priority. Accordingly, sensitive handling of personal data and content is required. Use and sharing of participant data occur only with individual consent.

Sales and marketing activities – both during and after the conference – are strictly prohibited. Contact by third parties based on participant data is not permitted. Forwarding participant data to third parties requires prior approval from both the respective participant and FINAKI. The same applies to any content from the event in the broadest sense.

6. Participant Information

Participant data will be published within the context of the event as follows:

- In a conference app (including name, photo, company, role, email address)
- In a participant list (name, company, position)

These data are used exclusively for internal information and networking purposes in the context of the FINAKI event. Any further use or distribution is prohibited.

7. Documentation of Results

After the event, all participants will receive a comprehensive documentation of the results, which includes:

- Delivered presentations (keynotes, best practices, etc.)
- Documentation of workshop results
- Final participant list

Photos and videos will be taken during the event to document presentations and discussions. By attending, participants consent to the creation and use of these recordings. In addition, FINAKI may also use these for marketing purposes.

FINAKI Deutschland GmbH is committed to protecting your personal data and handles it with the utmost care in accordance with applicable data protection laws, especially the EU GDPR and the German Federal Data Protection Act (BDSG).
